

Can you think of a way to parallelize this algorithm?

We could parallelize the algorithm by simply splitting the outermost forloop on all the threads for example, since they do not use anything other than the values they get from the indexes and only access their own index in the image array.